TO THE

Nobility & Gentry of the County of Roxburgh.

This MAP, Survey'd by their Order,

Is most humbly inscribed

by

Matthew Stobie.

REMARKS

This County is also known by the name of TIVIOT-DALE, the River Tiviot winding thro' it's most extensive dale.

Jedburgh, formerly called Jedworth or Jedwood, has been for several centurys the the County-town, the Castle was taken from the English by the Duke of Albany An: 1409 and demolish'd. The Abbey founded by David the 1st. was destroyed by the of Earl of Hertford An: 1545. there are still some remains of a Roman way running from Roxburgh to Jedburgh, and from thence towards Elden-hills.

Roxburgh-Castle was frequently the residence of the Kings of Scotland, sometimes it was in the posession of the English, but was taken & destroy'd by the Scotts An: 1460, James 2d. losing his life before it. The Town of Roxburgh since the County Town was destroy'd along with the Castle, this Town with Edinburgh, Sterling, and Berwick, composed the antient Court of the four Burrows, in which the Chamberlain of Scotland presided.

At Melrose David the 1st. founded an Abbey An: 1136, a beautiful Gothick structure, which the Earl of Hertford destroyed An: 1545. its remains which are considerable are still visited & admired by the curious.

Kelso stands upon the banks of the Tweed, its Abbey founded by David the 1st. was destroyed by the Earl of Hertford 1545.

At Edham, James Thomson, the Poet, author of the Seasons, was born the 11th of Sept.r 1700.
